The International Development Research Centre is a public corporation created by the Parliament of Canada in 1970 to support research designed to adapt science and technology to the needs of developing countries. The Centre's activity is concentrated in five sectors: agriculture, food and nutrition sciences; health sciences; information sciences; social sciences; and communications. IDRC is financed solely by the Parliament of Canada; its policies, however, are set by an international Board of Governors. The Centre's headquarters are in Ottawa, Canada. Regional offices are located in Africa, Asia, Latin America, and the Middle East.

Le Centre de recherches pour le développement international, société publique créée en 1970 par une loi du Parlement canadien, a pour mission d'appuyer des recherches visant à adapter la science et la technologie aux besoins des pays en voie de développement; il concentre son activité dans cinq secteurs : agriculture, alimentation et nutrition; information; santé; sciences sociales; et communications. Le CRDI est financé entièrement par le Parlement canadien, mais c'est un Conseil des gouverneurs international qui en détermine l'orientation et les politiques. Établi à Ottawa (Canada), il a des bureaux régionaux en Afrique, en Asie, en Amérique latine et au Moyen-Orient.

Preface

This is the eighth volume in the Devindex series issued by the International Development Research Centre (IDRC). The present issue contains entries from the Federal Republic of Germany, India, Morocco, the Netherlands, the Soviet Union, Sri Lanka, and Canada.

The main bibliographic index of this issue is organized in categories representing the purpose for which the document was produced:

A Facts, Trends, and Analyses
B Prescriptions for Decision-Making
C Official Policies, Plans, Programmes, Arrangements
D Development Action: Operational Experience
E Consequences and Evaluations
F Resources and Tools for Development

Four other indexes follow the first: subject, geographical, institution, and author. The names of countries are represented by two-character ISO codes[1] supplemented by codes for regions. In the subject and geographical indexes, the codes represent the countries to which the information in the document applies. In the institution index, the code represents the country where the institution is located. The complete subject index appears in both English and French.

Users of Devindex should direct their requests for documents to the participating institution of the country in which the documents were produced when the material cannot be obtained from the source identified in the reference and provide the reference number of each document requested. A list of participating institutions follows this preface. Most of the Canadian documents are available from IDRC in the form of microfiche to users in developing countries.

Records in this issue were processed by MINISIS software developed at IDRC for use on a Hewlett-Packard 3000 computer. A magnetic tape containing the records included in this and previous issues of Devindex is available, in ISO 2709 format,[2] to institutions that want to use it for experimental purposes or for information retrieval.

This issue, which was typeset directly from a computer tape, was compiled with the help of Marie-Paule Djoubou, Lois Fitzpatrick, and Shirley Witham.

Préface

Ceci est le huitième volume de la série Devindex préparée par le Centre de recherches pour le développement international (CRDI). Ce numéro comprend des enregistrements de la République fédérale d'Allemagne, de l'Inde, du Maroc, des Pays-Bas, de Sri Lanka, de l'Union soviétique et du Canada.

L'index bibliographique principal du présent numéro est ordonné en fonction de l'objectif de l'auteur, sus les rubriques suivantes :

A Faits, tendances et analyses
B Recommandations pour les prises de décisions
C Politiques, plans, dispositions et programmes officiels
D Actions de développement : expériences pratiques
E Conséquences et évaluations
F Ressources et moyens pour le développement

Il est suivi de quatre index : par sujet, géographique, par institutions et par auteur. Les noms des pays sont représentés par les codes de l'ISO[1] complétés des codes régionaux. Les codes de l'index par sujet et de l'index géographique indiquent les pays dont traite chaque document. Dans l'index par institution, le code représente le pays où se trouve l'institution. L'index par sujet est en anglais et en français.

Les utilisateurs de Devindex sont priés de s'adresser directement aux institutions participantes appropriées lorsqu'ils ne peuvent obtenir un document de la source identifiée dans la référence et de citer le numéro de référence de chaque document demandé. Une liste des institutions participant à DEVSIS suit cette préface. La majorité des documents canadiens sont disponibles au CRDI sus forme de microfiche aux utilisateurs en pays en voie de développement.

Les notices contenues dans ce numéro ont été traitées grâce au logiciel MINISIS développé au CRDI en fonction de l'ordinateur Hewlett-Packard 3000. Une bande magnétique contenant les notices figurant dans ce numéro et dans les précédents peut être obtenue, en format ISO 2709[2], par les institutions voulant y effectuer des interrogations ou des expériences.

Ce numéro de Devindex, composé directement à partir d'une bande d'ordinateur, a été produit avec l'aide de Marie-Paule Djoubou, Lois Fitzpatrick et Shirley Witham.

☐ Considers critically the case for using aid to exert leverage on the policies of recipient governments. Focuses on the main requirements for successful performance and the possibility of monitoring performance in a relatively objective fashion. Stresses the inherent conflicts in any aid allocation policy and the need for a fundamentally qualitative and subjective judgement as to what should be done.

☐ Questions whether or not Universal Primary Education (UPE) in Nigeria is an effective policy instrument for rural development as education seems to be a prime agent in perpetuating agricultural underdevelopment and encouraging young people to migrate away from their rural homes. Points out that, on the other hand, agricultural underdevelopment and unemployment, as well as mass rural-urban migration may result from factors which lie beyond the scope of education and, thus, it may be erroneous to assume that primary schooling exacerbates rural underdevelopment instead of helping to diminish the prevailing socio-economic duality between rural and urban areas.

☐ Describes the failure of development planners to integrate women into development. Observes that development strategies were planned by men who were insensitive to the needs of women in developing countries, the majority of whom lived in oppressive patriarchal societies. Concludes that if women are to become a vital force in their societies, change will have to be based on a new theory of development which embraces feminism.

☐ Examines the problem of West Indian migration to Canada due to local constraints on development, and as a means of adjustment to underdevelopment. Also examines the consequences of immigration to Canada. Discusses the integration of West Indian immigrants into Canadian society and considers, in the light of the present "brain drain", the contribution of returned migrants to the West Indies. Demonstrates, by an examination of skills, employment experiences and entrepreneurship of West Indians, that class and ethnicity, change in the modes of production and the needs of Canada have minimized the tendency for West Indians to become an underclass.

☐ Presents a functional interpretation of how the rural nonfarm sector currently operates in Central Province, Kenya, taking into account both economic and social factors. Considers family and clan, with a view to demonstrating that family connections influence the operation of the rural nonfarm sector in a variety of ways, and that the difficulty of entry into this sector is related to the emergence of a rural petit bourgeoisie. Concludes that rural nonfarm sector fulfills an important role in developing economies, and therefore, should be accorded much more attention.

☐ Explores the relationship between food supply and economic development, especially in Latin America and the Caribbean. Argues that the major problem of rural poverty is not one of producing enough food but of attacking the structural causes of underdevelopment and low productivity. Describes the impact of the approach to adult education which emphasizes the acquisition of skills to correspond to employment opportunities and technological innovation. Argues in favour of the Paulo Freire approach in which rural populations identify skills needed to solve the problems they have defined themselves.

☐ Investigates the relationship, in ten Black African countries, between the level and rate of economic development and the quantity of technology acquired by them from developed countries during the ten year period, 1965-1975. Raises the question about the perception of technology in the industrialized countries as providing the all-encompassing solution to the problems of underdevelopment. Identifies those channels of technology transfer that appear to have the potential of having a positive influence in terms of economic and social development. Concludes that developing countries should be very selective in their acquisition of foreign technology.

☐ Discusses Tanzania's policy of institutionalizing a middle peasantry while stymieing the development of capitalism's principal classes. Using tobacco production as an example, demonstrates the way in which the middle peasant household producers are being squeezed and pauperized by this backward capitalist system. Argues that the system hinders the concentration of capital and prevents the socialization of labour while perpetuating labour intensive agricultural production.

☐ Argues that Canadian aid in the Commonwealth Caribbean is compatible with the aim of Caribbean governments to achieve greater economic diversification, self-reliance in food production and the development of secondary manufactures in order to reduce Caribbean vulnerability inherent in mono-culture production. Concludes that Canadian aid behaviour deviates significantly from the dependency model of aid, and is, indeed, supportive of Caribbean development despite a dearth of Canadian direct aid involvement in industrial projects.

☐ Examines political role of Argentine business groups and the manner in which they have influenced economic policy. Identifies two periods with conflicting economic strategies: the pre-Peronist period (1850-1930's) during which economy and political power was monopolized by the agro-livestock oligarchy who protected British interests by orienting economy towards food export and import of consumer items, the Peronist period which saw the rise of light industrialists who encouraged state intervention in the economy, resulting in protection of local industry and increased political representation. ☐ Presents holistic approach of the primary health care and adult education programmes in developing countries. Shows how the linkages between both have been used by development planners in increasing the impact of each. The common factors which appear in both programmes are the provision of equal access to health and education, the development of self-reliance in individuals and community participation in planning and implementing programmes. Concludes that it is through adult education that the goals of primary health care will be realised.

Pilot Research Project in Growth Centres, New Delhi IN, Sep 1973.

☐ A simple procedure has been described here to solve the problem of identifying settlements which are subject to a health hazard, and thus in need of adequate health facilities. A health hazard index has been derived following a simple weighting technique on the basis of information for each settlement with respect to existing health facilities, mortality rates, accessibility conditions, total number of women and percentage of female literacy. The index was obtained by weighted sum of the above variables after each one was transformed to decile scores. It includes an illustration of the index calculation procedure based on data collected from the Aska Block, Orissa, India.
